THIRTY-YEAR-OLD WILL IS REJECTED

Duffy Drew It Himself at Age of 98, and Witnesses Are Not Clear.

Asserting that all the circumstances attending the will of Owen Duffy, which was executed thirty years ago, were suspicious, Surrogate Church of Brooklyn, refused yesterday to admit the document to probate.

The application was made by Margaret Duffy, only daughter of the testator. She testified that her father executed the will when he was ninety-eight years old. Because of the delay in presenting the document for probate also because the memory of the two subscribing witnesses has been greatly impaired the Surrogate refused to accept the will. In his opinion, she says:

"The testimony of one of the subscribers to the will shows that he recalls practically nothing of the transaction involving the execution of the alleged will, save that he signed the document. Instead of having the slightest remembrance as to the testamentary capacity of the testator, or as to what the latter did or said on the occasion in question, the only evidence, apart from his own signature to the paper, was to the effect that everybody seemed satisfied with what was being done."

The testimony of the lawyer who drafted this will, who was one of the witnesses to its execution, is very remarkable. He describes with some minuteness what took place at the time of the drafting and execution of this alleged will, as if the transaction had occurred only a few days before his appearance on the witness stand. This of itself would create suspicion.

There are other circumstances in the case which strongly corroborate this view of the occurrence. The testator at the time in question was physically very weak. That he was manifestly ill in his dotage is shown by the fact that he attended no business whatever in his sole occupation, which was to sit at home and prevent their wandering away. The evidence of such persons as recall the old man's qualities at the time tends to show that he was then in the last stages of senility."

JOHN FITZPATRICK, OLD CITIZEN, DEAD.

Prominent in Irish Affairs and Had Occupied Same House for Sixty-two Years.

John Fitzpatrick died late last night in the home in which he had lived for sixty-two years, at No. 8 Ridge street. He had been failing for several months and the end was not unexpected.

Fitzpatrick came to this country from Ireland sixty-two years ago, when he was three years old, and ever since he had lived in the same house. He brought up a large family. One son is in the Senate, another in the House, another in the Foreign Office, and two sons-in-law are policemen.

"Always an active Tammany man, he was a personal friend of Richard Croker, John Kelly, and the old-time Democrats. He was a member of the old Volunteers Fire Department and of several Irish patriotic organizations. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus, which he had joined from St. Mary's Church in Ridge street, of which he had been a communicant since his arrival in this country, and to which he had always been a large contributor."

DIVORCED PRINCESS CHEERED BY SAXONS

MUNICH, Bavaria, Oct. 26.—The Countess of Montignac, better known as Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, who was divorced by her husband, the present King of Saxony, when she ran away with Andre Giron, the tutor of her children, four years ago, is here to see her two elder boys, who have been kept from her, and when she appeared on the street last evening there was an outburst of enthusiastic affection toward her which has rarely been equalled. Her mother, the Grand Duchess of Tuscany, wept with emotion as men waved their hats and women their handkerchiefs and the crowd cheered in honor of the Princess.

When the King divorced his wife he banished her from the country, and decreed that she should never see her children. This rule was modified later after the Pope and many other temporal and spiritual powers had been appealed to, and last evening she was allowed to see her two boys here at the Saxony Legation. The elder son, George, will be the King of Saxony if he outlives his father.

The youngest child, Anna Monica Pia, three years old, was with her mother, the ex-wife, when she came to see the King to enter a covenant on reaching her majority, in order that, according to his notion, the offence of her Princess mother may be expiated.
